From the ocean into the glass

Where the rugged Northern Italian Alps lie today, there was an ocean filled with colourful coral reefs 220 million years ago. Over the course of millions of years the fossilized coral reefs turned into an impressive mountain landscape. Today the rock layers are still full of hidden fossils from their past life in the ocean, like the nautilus snail with its perfectly formed lime casing. The vines of the RIFF wines grow on the slopes of this mountain landscape in the Veneto region. The Alois Lageder Winery from Alto Adige produces them together with partners from the region.
